The COMPASS

NORTHWESTERN HIGH SCHOOL
HYATTSVILLE, MARYLAND

FOREWORD

"Our publications, our activities, and we ourselves are the windows of Northwestern."

—John P. Speicher

Quill and Scroll Initiation,
May, 1953

A window in a cathedral is materially no better than a glass window. Yet the people who view the two consider the former a work of art, the latter just a piece of glass. They are both glass. The cathedral window stands as a memorial to man's restless ambition; the cheap glass window is the result of man's listlessness. People today are like those two pieces of glass, the educated and the ignorant. The educated person stands as a memorial to his teachers; the ignorant person shatters as does the cheap piece of glass. Students through education may become more than just a piece of glass — they reflect the dignity and beauty of the cathedral window.

To you our Alma Mater
Our praises we unite.
Standing like a beacon
in Navy Blue and White
With wisdom ever flowing
thru your spacious doors,
Courage that will guide us,
Knowledge to explore.
Our hearts are here in Maryland
Where loyalty is King,
So to you Northwestern High School
Let honor ever ring.

ADMINISTRATION

framework for the windows . . .

Maintaining an inter-relation between the school and the community as well as between the faculty and students, the principal, the vice-principal and the office staff administer and coordinate the school's functions and business.

Late arrivals and early departures check in and out through the office. Aided by student secretaries, the office quietly solves the many problems that arise in the daily routine of a school.

"What wisdom can you find that is greater than kindness."

Jean Jacques Rousseau

Mrs. Young
Mrs. Kleiman

Hard at work in the office are: Barbara Ferguson, checking morning attendance records; Mrs. Young, answering telephone; Joan Beall, examining faculty list; and Eileen Danner conferring with Mrs. Kleiman.

Class Activities

"Be sure you are right, then go ahead."
Crockett.

To have a clear mind today is most important. We are faced with decisions, any one of which may be the paramount one of our life. We cannot stand shaking in the rush of life; we must stride forward, or we remain forever, on the outside looking in.

It is frustration to peer through a cloudy window. Education helps to clear that window . . . we may see the day and act without fear. Education helps us to know that we are capable of facing our life happily.

To know our minds and to know ourselves so that we may march confidently with the people of our time.

Dramatics and speech students practice their parts for one of the weekly programs presented on radio station WINX. Harlan Austin is directed by Mrs. Dawson as Mr. Justice listens and Lee Clark ponders over a script. Co-workers are: Peggy Taylor, Katherine Moore, Anita Breerwood, Joyce Koenig, Fleur Hodgson, Jimmy Henson, Russell Wall, Ernest Clayton, and Carol Tutton.

These English students use the library for research work on their term papers. One student consults Miss Ruth Phillips, librarian, about finding information for her topic.

Conducting a panel discussion on "Juvenile Delinquency" are these sophomore English students. Standing is Walter Arnold ready to acknowledge Donna Brigg's bid for the floor. Waiting for Donna to speak are Robert Bashoor, Linda Beall, and Carolyn Bowers.

The most important window of Northwestern is the window of English, the window that forms our spoken and written expression whether we be president or common laborer.

Grammar, spelling, literature form a working schedule which a student follows throughout his entire life. "Giants in the Earth", "Hamlet", "The House of Seven Gables", "Macbeth" and "The Bridge of San Luis Rey", were read and studied, gleaned and remembered.

Diagraming was practiced and spelling was pondered. Appositive, case, gerunds, interjections, nominative and participles culminate into working lingo for all students.

Through a few hours of study, we can open the window a wiser well-spoken, learned student.

Sandra Smith, student director, checks the blocking of the play.

Mrs. Dawson

Mr. Justice

"A man's character is revealed by his speech."
Menander

Dramatics

As a man thinks so does he speak. And as a man speaks so will he write. And to write is to symbolize thoughts.

To the high school student, English is the foundation of his learning. English teaches not only the facts of education, but also the intangible methods a student must possess to learn smoothly and correctly.

To be able to think clearly, to be able to express in writing what one thinks, and to be able to tell the world what one knows, that is the job English is teaching.

Men speak and write and think as they have been taught. English classes today at Northwestern are moulding the boy and girl into a clear window through which their thoughts and character and learning will shine brightly.

To give a demonstration speech is a requisite for all speech students. Practicing this phase of public speaking is Barbara Galentine.

Deeply absorbed, Maurice Kelly stands behind Maxine Boyer and Joyce Elder, who are "just getting the facts" from a book.

In the foreground are Sheila Smith and Sheryl Logan working on page makeups.

Linwood Dove, Joan Stogner, Norma Fulghum and Coleen Mills read over the shoulders of Barbara Porter, Renee George and Shirley Fox. Rosemary Long and Mary Ellen Bailey are the busy typists.

Doris Walters and Lois Groves check THE NOR'WESTER copy as Patsy Dix and Fleur Hodgson discuss a feature article. Sandra Smith, Ann Rudd, Joe Carstens, Evelyn Stransky and Bob Lewis form another group, as Regina Chapman kids with the cameraman.

Journalism

"The chief glory of every people arises from its authors."

Samuel Johnson

Authors of any time are the windows to their era, through which we can see what the men of history have done.

Today in our journalism classes we are building the eyes through which the future will see us. In our reporting, writing, editing and in the developing of other journalistic fundamentals we are gaining the knowledge and ability to tell accurately the story of our lives.

Between today and tomorrow, therefore, no doors will be closed.

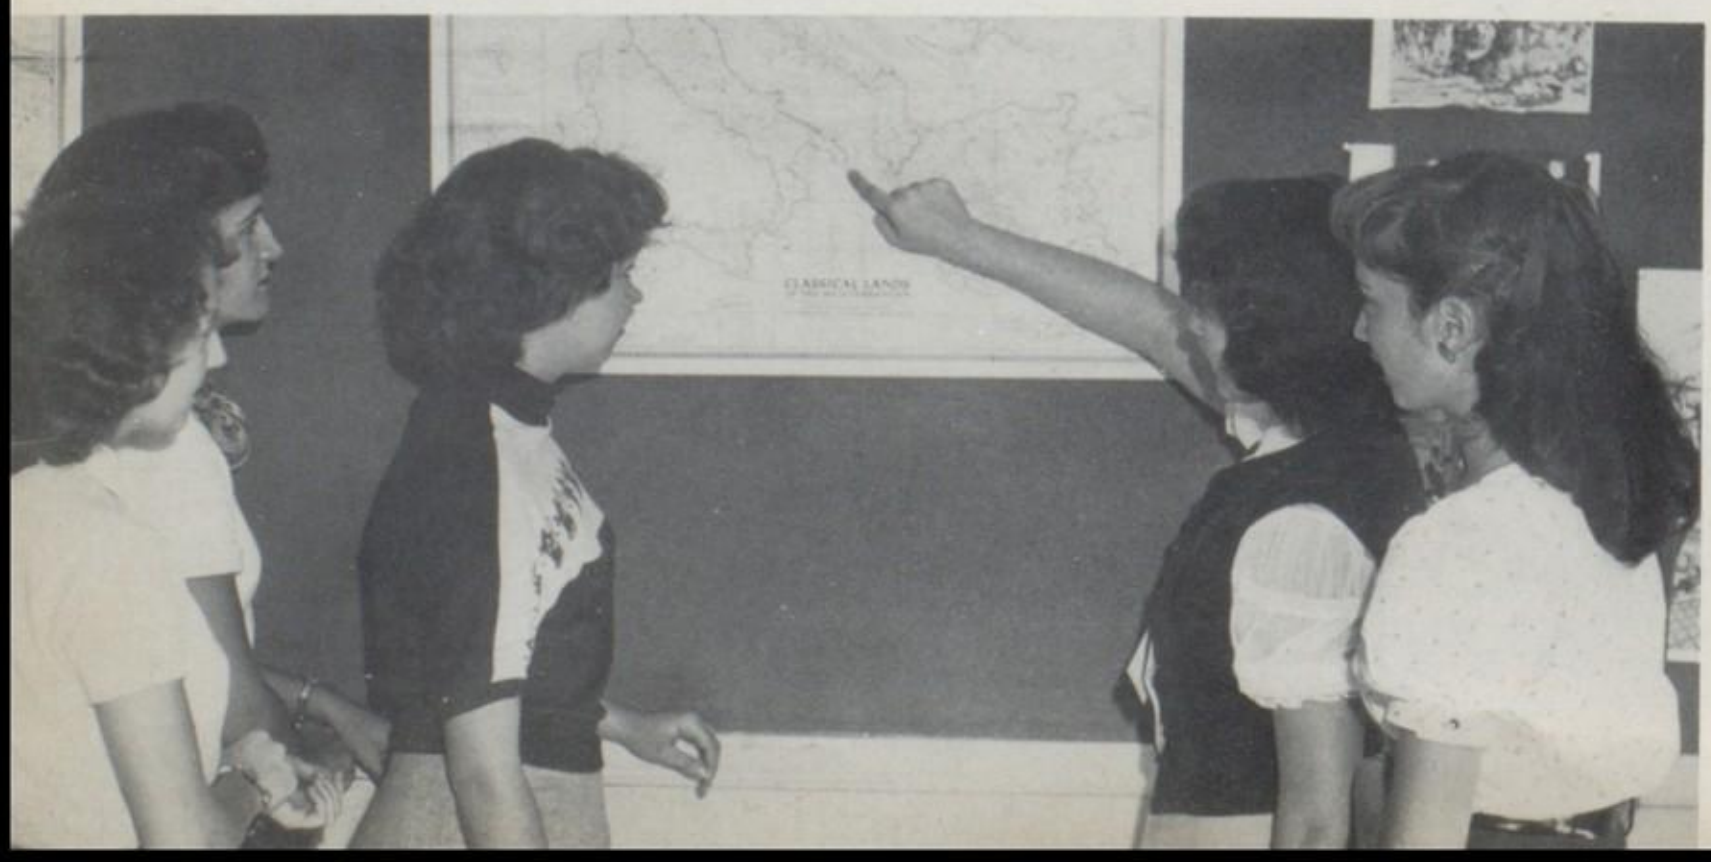
Social Studies

"History is indeed the witness of the times, the light of truth."

Cicero

World history proves to be a study of "faraway places with strange soundin' names." Italy is the center of interest according to Jacqueline McGraw. Looking on are Mary Singer, Judy Kasko, Betty Blunton and Jean Teal.



Sally McNay points to the map while Betty Hainey refers to a textbook during a United States history class.

Reporting on present and past history is Barbara Amoss. Among those taking notes are Willard Zangwell, Joan Provinsky, Roger Seigel and Joan Lee Smith.

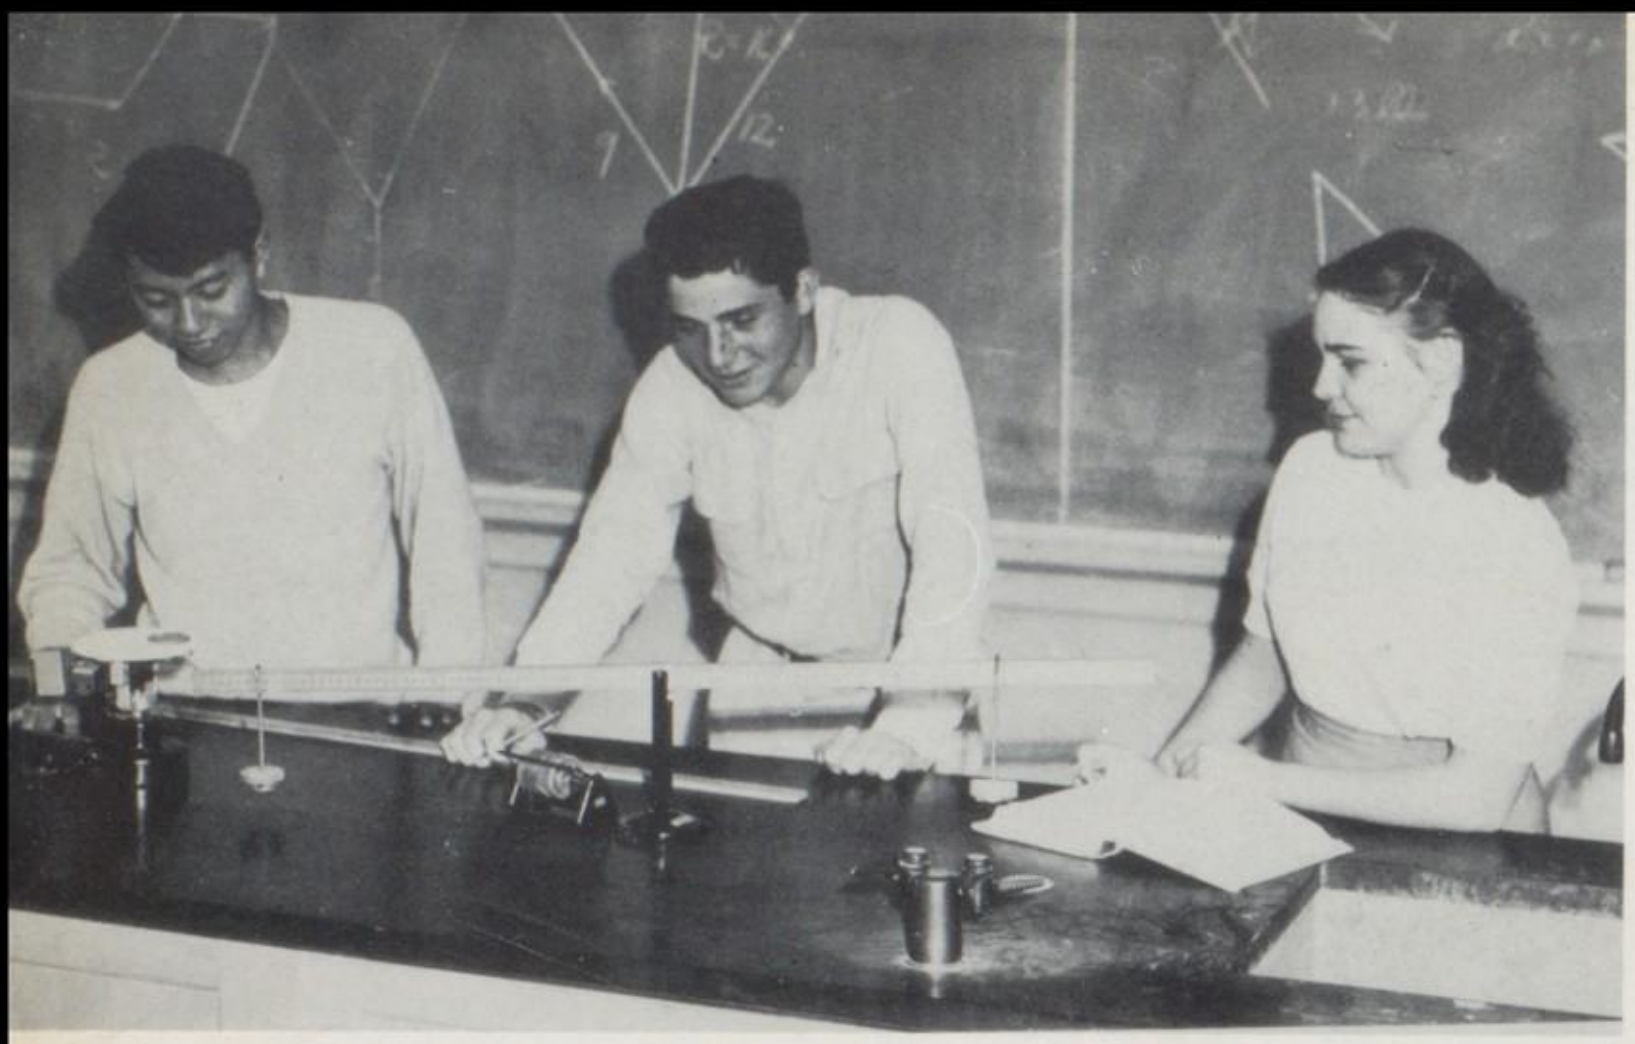
The mirror of history reflects through the window of the future, and from the outside it appears that only the past can be seen.

Through study of history, it is found that, in reality, both past and future can be seen in the present, as "history repeats itself."

A three-year course at Northwestern takes the students from the beginnings of world history through a comprehensive study of the background of our country.

Then, using this background, the seniors gaze at the present and the future, preparing themselves for responsible citizenship, in problems of democracy.

As part of their world history lesson, these students look for a certain country. DeWitte Cooke uses the map; Virginia Smith checks the atlas; Judy Slavin uses the globe.



Dennis Asaka and Edward Condolon conduct a physics experiment involving weights while Sylvia Pitzen refers to a textbook for a discussion of the experiment.

Science

"Equipped with his five senses, man explores the universe around him and calls the adventure science."

Edwin Hubble

Why does one look out a window?

Because many times one does not know what is outside that window, and the call of the unknown, named curiosity by some, beckons, promising new adventures.

And so it is with men of science. They are driven by an intense curiosity. They must know and must see for themselves what lies just beyond their current knowledge. They build windows to see through. They build doors which open for them, they possess what they have sought.

Northwestern students are beginning now, in biology, in chemistry, in physics, to fit the pieces of their windows together, so that they too may see into the world of tomorrow.

Biological specimens are examined by Carol Wentz, Mary Peay, Marcia Slavinski, Timmy White, David Palmer, Perry Wilkinson, Charlotte Dammeyer, and Joe Pear, in order to complete their studies of algae and fungi.

Sulphuric acid plus zinc yields zinc sulphate and hydrogen so Phil Guidry, Janet Bendit, Ed Bernard, Larry Bunch, Peter Hutchinson, and David Kolda discover by experimentation in chemistry class.

Interested students of Latin are Sharon Reeves, Stanley Pickett, and Janet Johnson, who study miniatures pertaining to the ancient Romans. Note the pledge to our United States flag in the background.

Languages

"The ancient languages are the scabbard which holds the mind's sword."

Goethe

How appropriate these words of Goethe may seem to many! They bring to mind a duel, with conjugations, translations, and verb plans pitting their strategy against the poor student.

But as the year progresses, determination brings ability, and with ability comes confidence. Confusion is replaced by assurance and by love for and interest in what has become the student's next-to-native tongue.

And after two years, he finds that it really isn't impossible parler francais, habler espanol or dicere latin, and he has won the duel.

Apparently Catherine Herbert has run across an amusing article in her French book. Kay Johnson laughs at Catherine's antics, though Charles Phillips dons a somber mood.

The constant companion of every language student is his text book.

Studying Spanish and the Latin American countries are Pat Small, who is using a map as a source of information, and Janette Stover, gleaning the facts from a textbook.

Child care is practiced by: Gladys Robey, Emily Walker, Joan Ellis, Shirley Fox, Peggy Bryant, Renee George, and Garnett Cooke, on their friends Ann, Nancy Sarry, Dickie, Lynn and Diane.

"Home-keeping hearts are the happiest."

Home Economics

A definite window to the future is the home economics department. Within its doors girls of Northwestern prepare for homemaking in a practical and enjoyable course.

General home economics is available to any girl for the three years of senior high school. A major in home ec. consists of more concentrated work in the first two years and two hours a day in the third year. Time is divided among foods, clothing, and work in the nursery and apartment.

Suits must be ironed on the wrong side, so Barbara Owens, Marie Schulze, and Loretta Attick learn in clothing laboratory.

Classes in food preparation result in a dinner for Annie Redd Fontaine, Doris Peach, Virginia Snyder, Marilyn Peck, Una McMahon, Doris Mason, Constance Simpson, and Carole Proffie.

Soon to be secretaries, these commercial students are hard at work in their shorthand class. Ruth Farrell dictates to Jean Crother and Jeriann Weber.

Totaling accounts of the day is Lois Stitt. Seated next to her is Eugene Nieman who makes entries in a ledger.

Through the windows of the world the need of speed and efficiency is seen.

Shorthand, typing, bookkeeping, business machines and office practice are taught so that this required skill is learned in the best age of acquiring knowledge.

Northwestern's commercial department prepares students for the business world of tomorrow.

Tellers of the school bank carry out their duties as part of Bookkeeping II class. Standing is Jean Six while her co-workers, seated, assist her. Barbara Forsythe, Joan Holman, Mary Grace Merson, and Eva Jean Wood are the assistants.

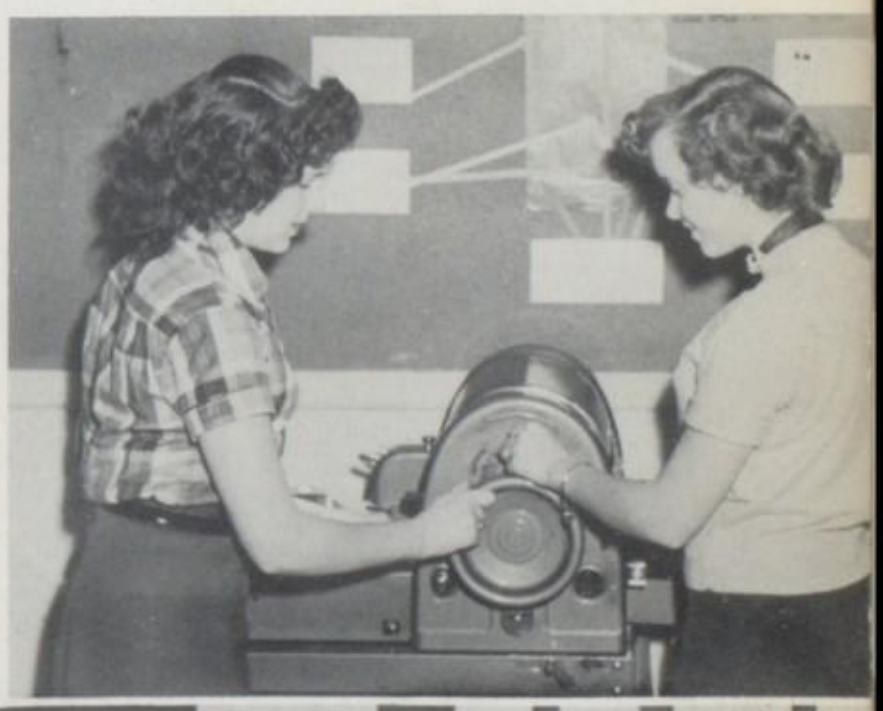
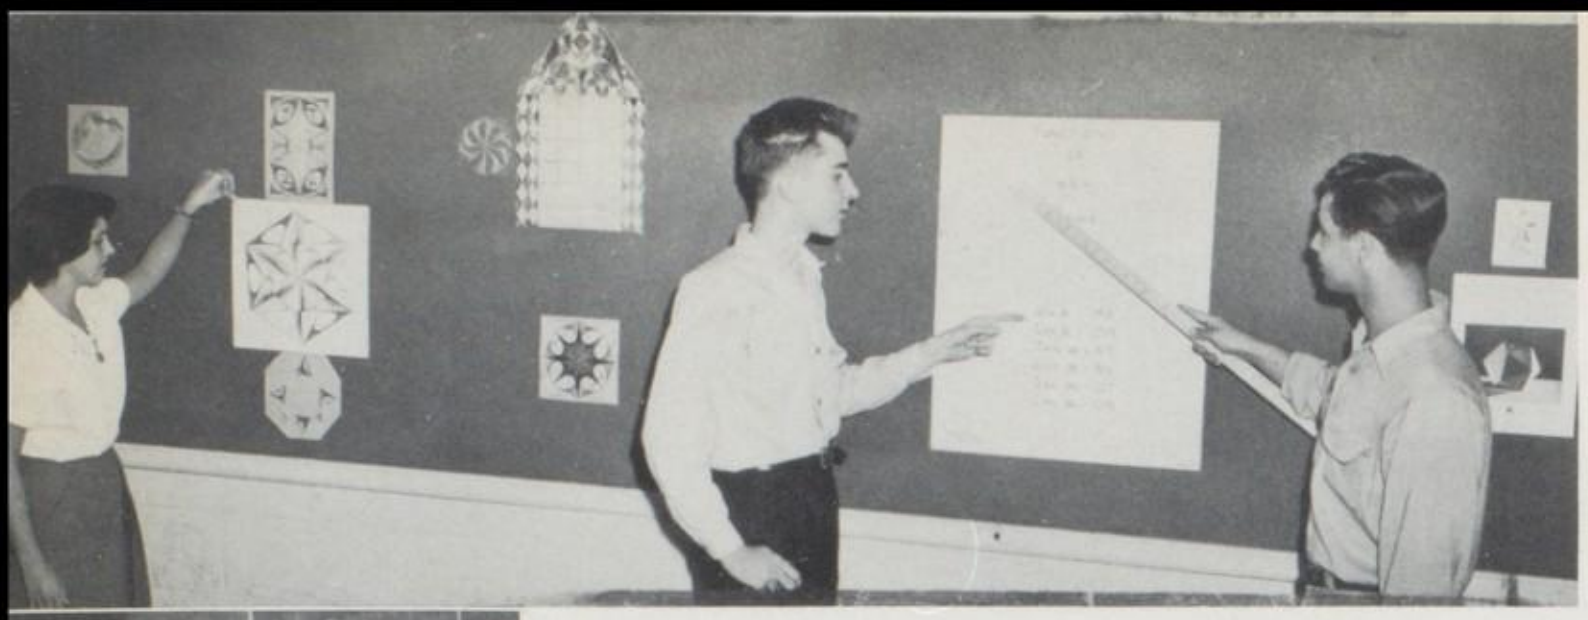
Joy Benson and Norma Armstrong glance over their exercises in the pamphlets. Behind Joy and Norma, Joan Brown sneaks a peek at the keys and Charlotte Fuller improves her typing technique.

Office practice requires students to have a touch of mechanical genius. Sandy McCord and Judy Viar demonstrate the workings of the mimeograph machine.



Preparing themselves for a secretarial career are these typists: Buckey, Joan Brown, and Joy Benson. Norma Armstrong pauses to erase a mistake.



Georgie Kirtley places a drawing on the bulletin board; Ray Mowery and Burt Steinman use a chart for their assignment.

Keith Judd shows fellow geometry students the answer to a previous night's lesson.

Mathematics

Mathematics is one of those windows which, when viewed through by some, appears to be clear. Others find it quite cloudy and are unable to distinguish figures on the other side.

Here at Northwestern in the mathematics department students learn how to wash the cloudy window. The world's future Einsteins gaze through the planes of solid geometry and trigonometry, while the pains of plane geometry and algebra are lessened for others.

Review of math and business arithmetic are usually open windows to high school students, and their study serves largely to prepare them for work later.

From open to clear to cloudy — the varying degrees of visibility seem to determine our attitude toward math. Isn't it often that, in despair, we wish them all broken?

"Angling may be said to be so like the mathematics that it can never be fully learnt."

Izaak Walton

Cedric Young seems uninterested as Mathias Zahinser and Barbara Epstein point out statements and reasons for their geometry problem.

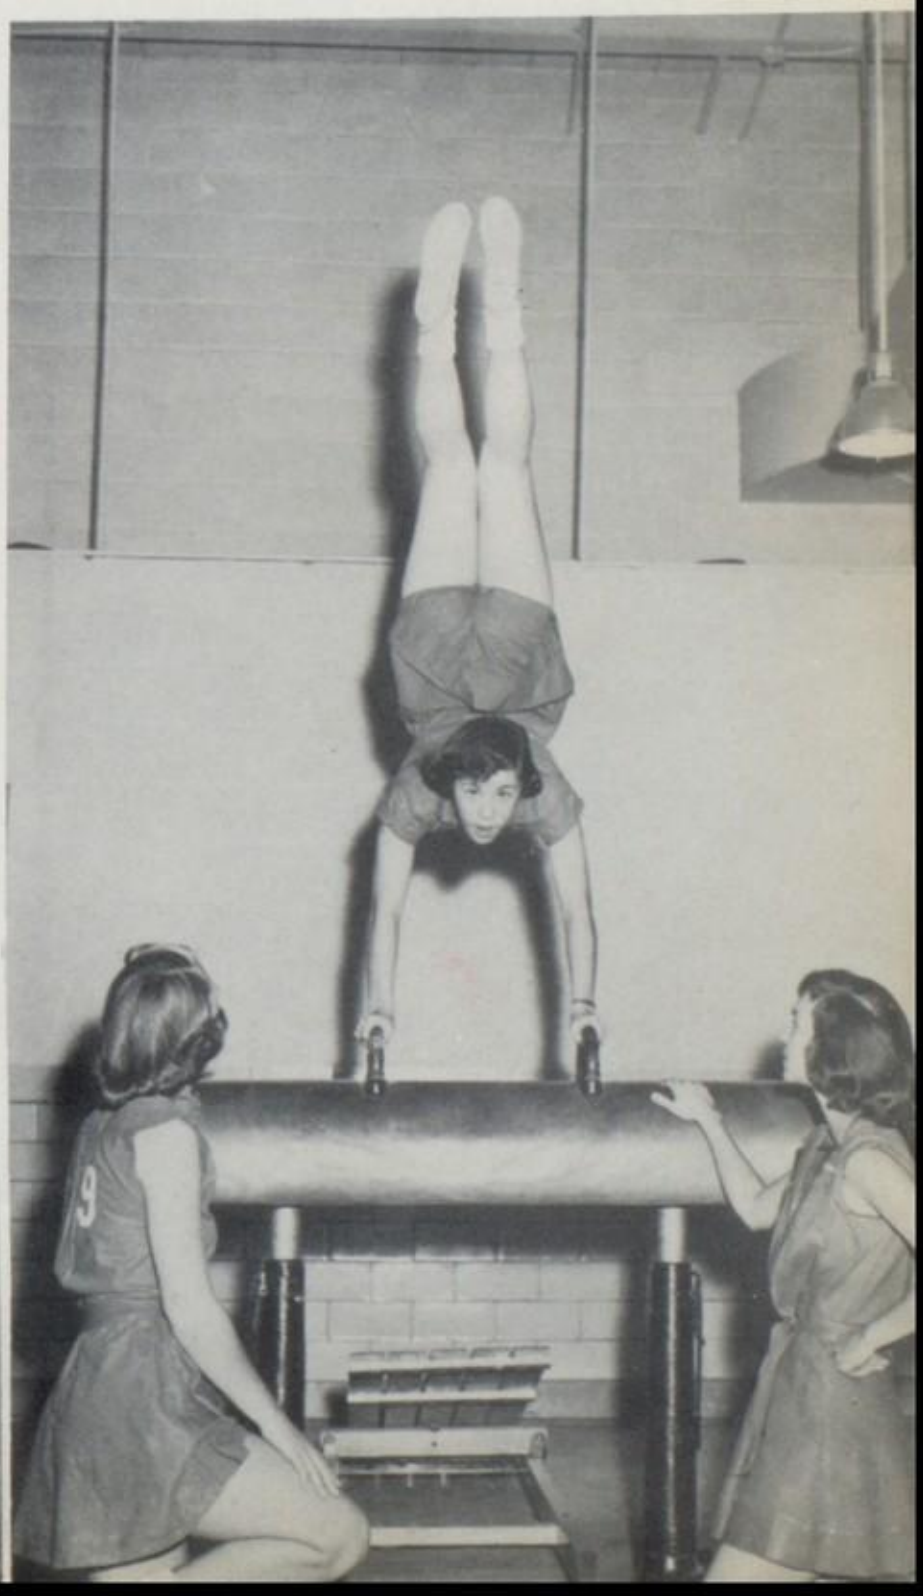
Bearing no resemblance to any other class, physical education is as profitable as a difficult mathematics course to those who take it.

On the field and in the gymnasium, varsity prospects are selected by coaches and taught to make the most of their abilities.

But ability is definitely not the primary requirement — the class teaches many games, exercises, acrobatics, dancing, and especially good sportsmanship to the students.

Robert Davis shoots for a basket as Vernon Long guards him.

"To love the game beyond the prize."
Henry Newbolt



Poised in mid-air Laurie Maffay glances at her audience. Blakely Littleton and Jean Skidmore watch Laurie do the exercise.

Music

George Keady and Fred Plubell play selections of music before joining the rest of the band.

Music — a window thrown open at sunrise to let in the fresh air of a new morning.

Like a new day, music holds different experiences for each person. For some it is an exciting experience; for others, it is peace and rest; for others — cn escape.

The music department at Northwestern offers choral music, general music, music theory and band, in all of which any student may take part.

"Who hears music, feels his solitude peopled at once."

Robert Browning

Mr. Ronca

Miss Beckman

Members of Northwestern's Choir practice numbers which they will use at future engagements.

Art

"Dreams are the true interpreters of our inclinations, but art is required to sort and understand them."

Montaigne

Describing what they see with brightly tainted brushes are art students Fred Ropko, John Slack, Howard Sergent and David Sergent.

Art class is a special place. There are many men on earth but the power to create is given to few.

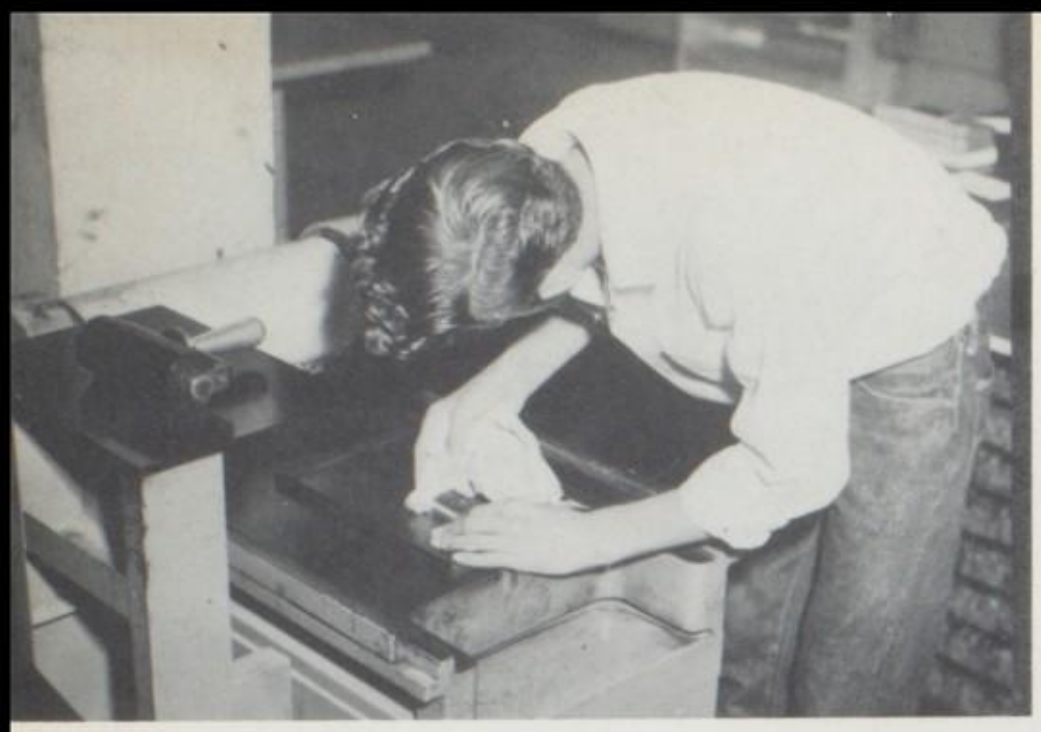
The talent of the prospective artist cannot be limited to one field. Here at Northwestern the background for a future is laid. Drawing, painting, sculpturing, the different phases of the artist's career — all are attempted, so that tomorrow — no matter what choice he makes, he will be ready to conquer this field.

Today he stands on a stepping stone; tomorrow he will stand on the shore.

Mr. Young

Mr. Downing

Developing their individual artistic talents are Peter Miller, Betty Louchs, Alice Le Merle, Al Johnson and Gerry Dade. Near Alice is another student.



All in a day's work, Robert Haberland prepares type in print shop.

Shop Training

To gain skill and confidence takes time and patience. But once acquired, the ability to create is enormous and in the hands of those men who possess it will go the pieces of the foundation of tomorrow.

Northwestern's shop releases the bolt to the window — students no longer gaze upon creations — they step through and create. In the metal shop, in the wood shop, in the print shop, and in mechanical drawing the bolts are thrown away, the windows swing open.

Pouring out through them — from the hands of the skilled and confident come the creations that the rest of us can but look upon and appreciate.

Observing Tom Folks work with the table saw is Bryce Rathbone. Gary Hartman operates the wood lathe and Marlene Tomford cuts wood on the band saw.

Using one of the drawing boards, Stephen Katy draws with necessary implements.

Doing needed research work on their term papers are members of Mr. Smith's third period P.O.D. class. Miss Ruth Phillips lends needed assistance.

"Give me the room whose every nook is dedicated to a book."

Frank Sherman

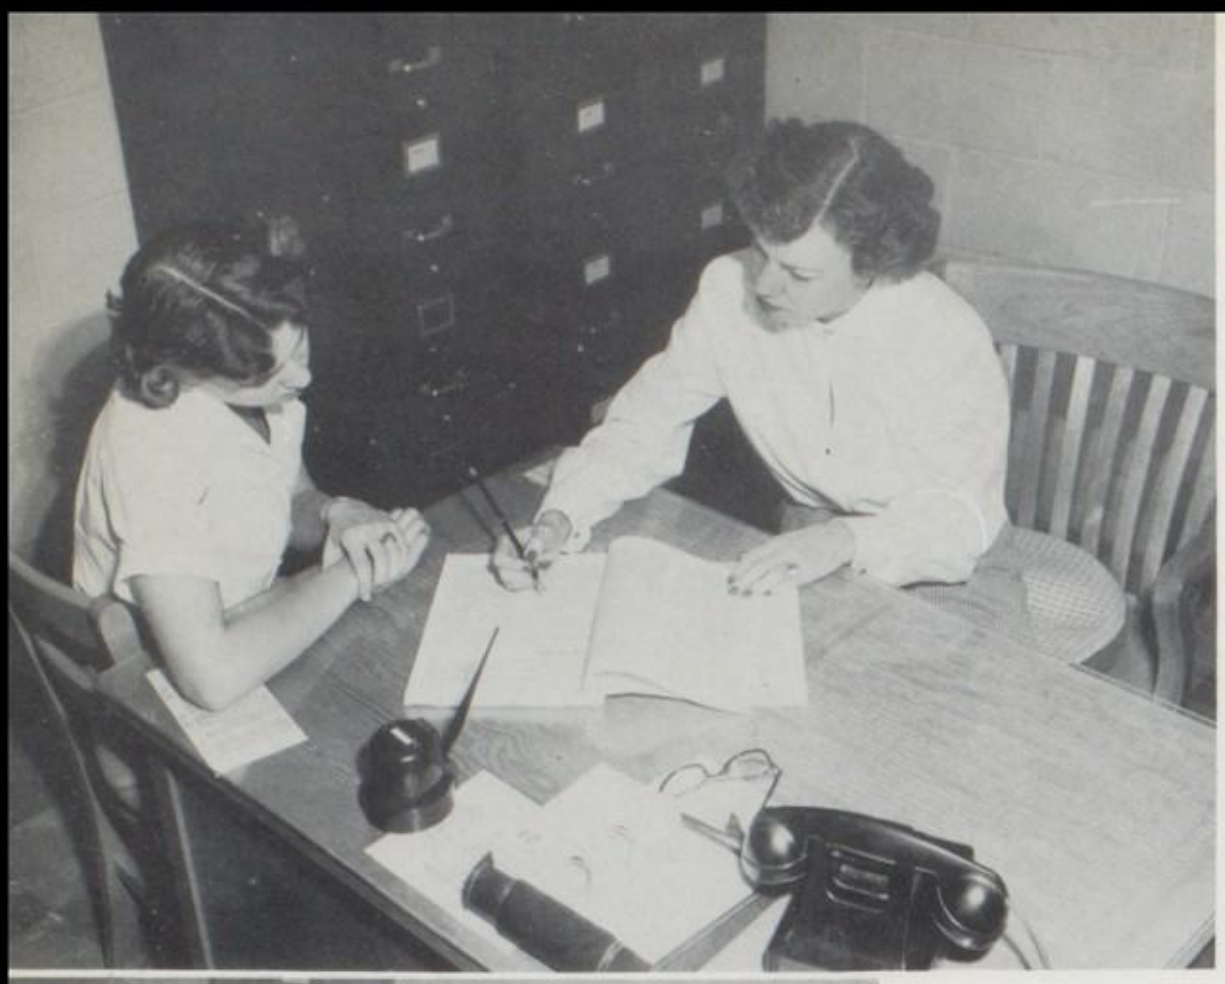
Library

Perhaps there are history questions to be answered, perhaps there is research to be done on a term paper. Maybe the student just wants a good book to read in his spare time.

In such cases, he can always turn to Northwestern's own library, with its large and constantly growing supply of literature. Encyclopedias, magazines, pamphlets — books of fact, of fantasy, and of fiction.

Martha Stroup signs the card necessary for withdrawing a book. Preparing to stamp this bit of literature is Mary Carol Savage. Looking through the student card file is Allene Ableiter.

Miss Phillips



Looking over Lovejoy's College Guide is Miss Spicknall who advises Peggy Troy about the colleges which she may attend.

Often there arises in everyday school life a need for someone to clean the filmy windows of confusion.

Guidance counselors are parents away from home. Your problems become theirs. The right college to attend, the changing of a schedule are important to them. They guide a student along the rocky road of education, making the path smooth, the burden easier.

Assisting Northwestern's guidance counselors are Ronnie Fliss, Sally McNey, Bill Shenberger, John Huffman, Becky Spitzer and Mary Pat Cobey.

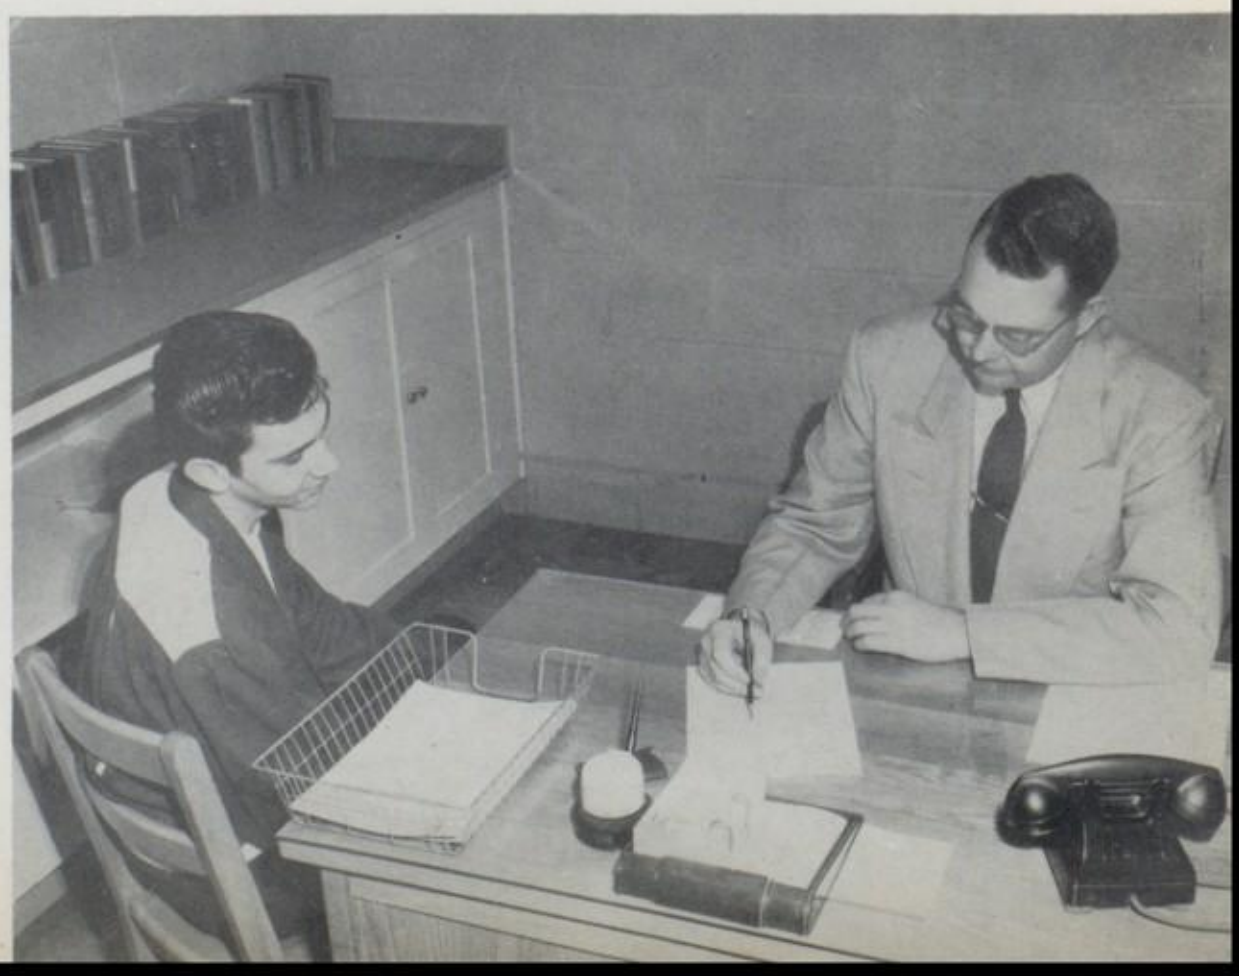
Mr. Cartee

Allen Astrin seeks information about a future job from Mr. Cartee.



Mr. Kemerer

"What a job this is!" exclaims Bonnie Wilson as she weaves around the posts. This maneuver is set up by Mr. Kemerer, the driving instructor.

Drivers' Training

"Abundant caution does not have harm."

Coke

The majority of American teenagers will sooner or later be looking out a certain window — a car window — from behind a steering wheel.

Driver's training teaches these high school teenagers the driving techniques, the traffic laws, and most important of all — auto control, so that tomorrow they can safely see the world from behind these moving windows.

The Cafeteria

Focal points of all noontime activities, Northwestern's cafeteria is the meeting place of students and faculty alike. Serving approximately six hundred lunches per day, the cafeteria is symbolic of a big school. The windows of the cafeteria are the windows of Northwestern.

Seen in this photo of the cafeteria are students about to satisfy their ravenous appetites. Miss Sullivan, cafeteria manager, witnesses these scenes for an hour and a half each school day.

Miss Sullivan

Mr. Maholtz

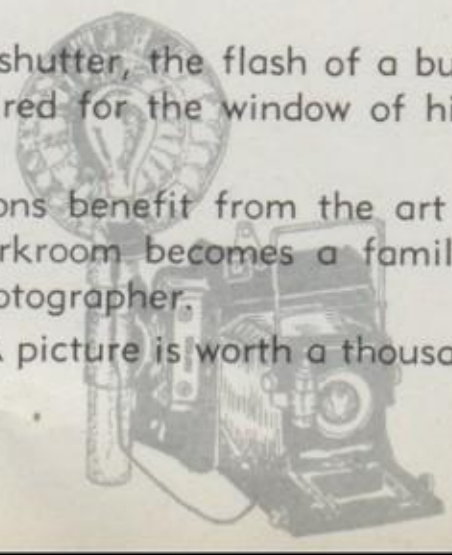
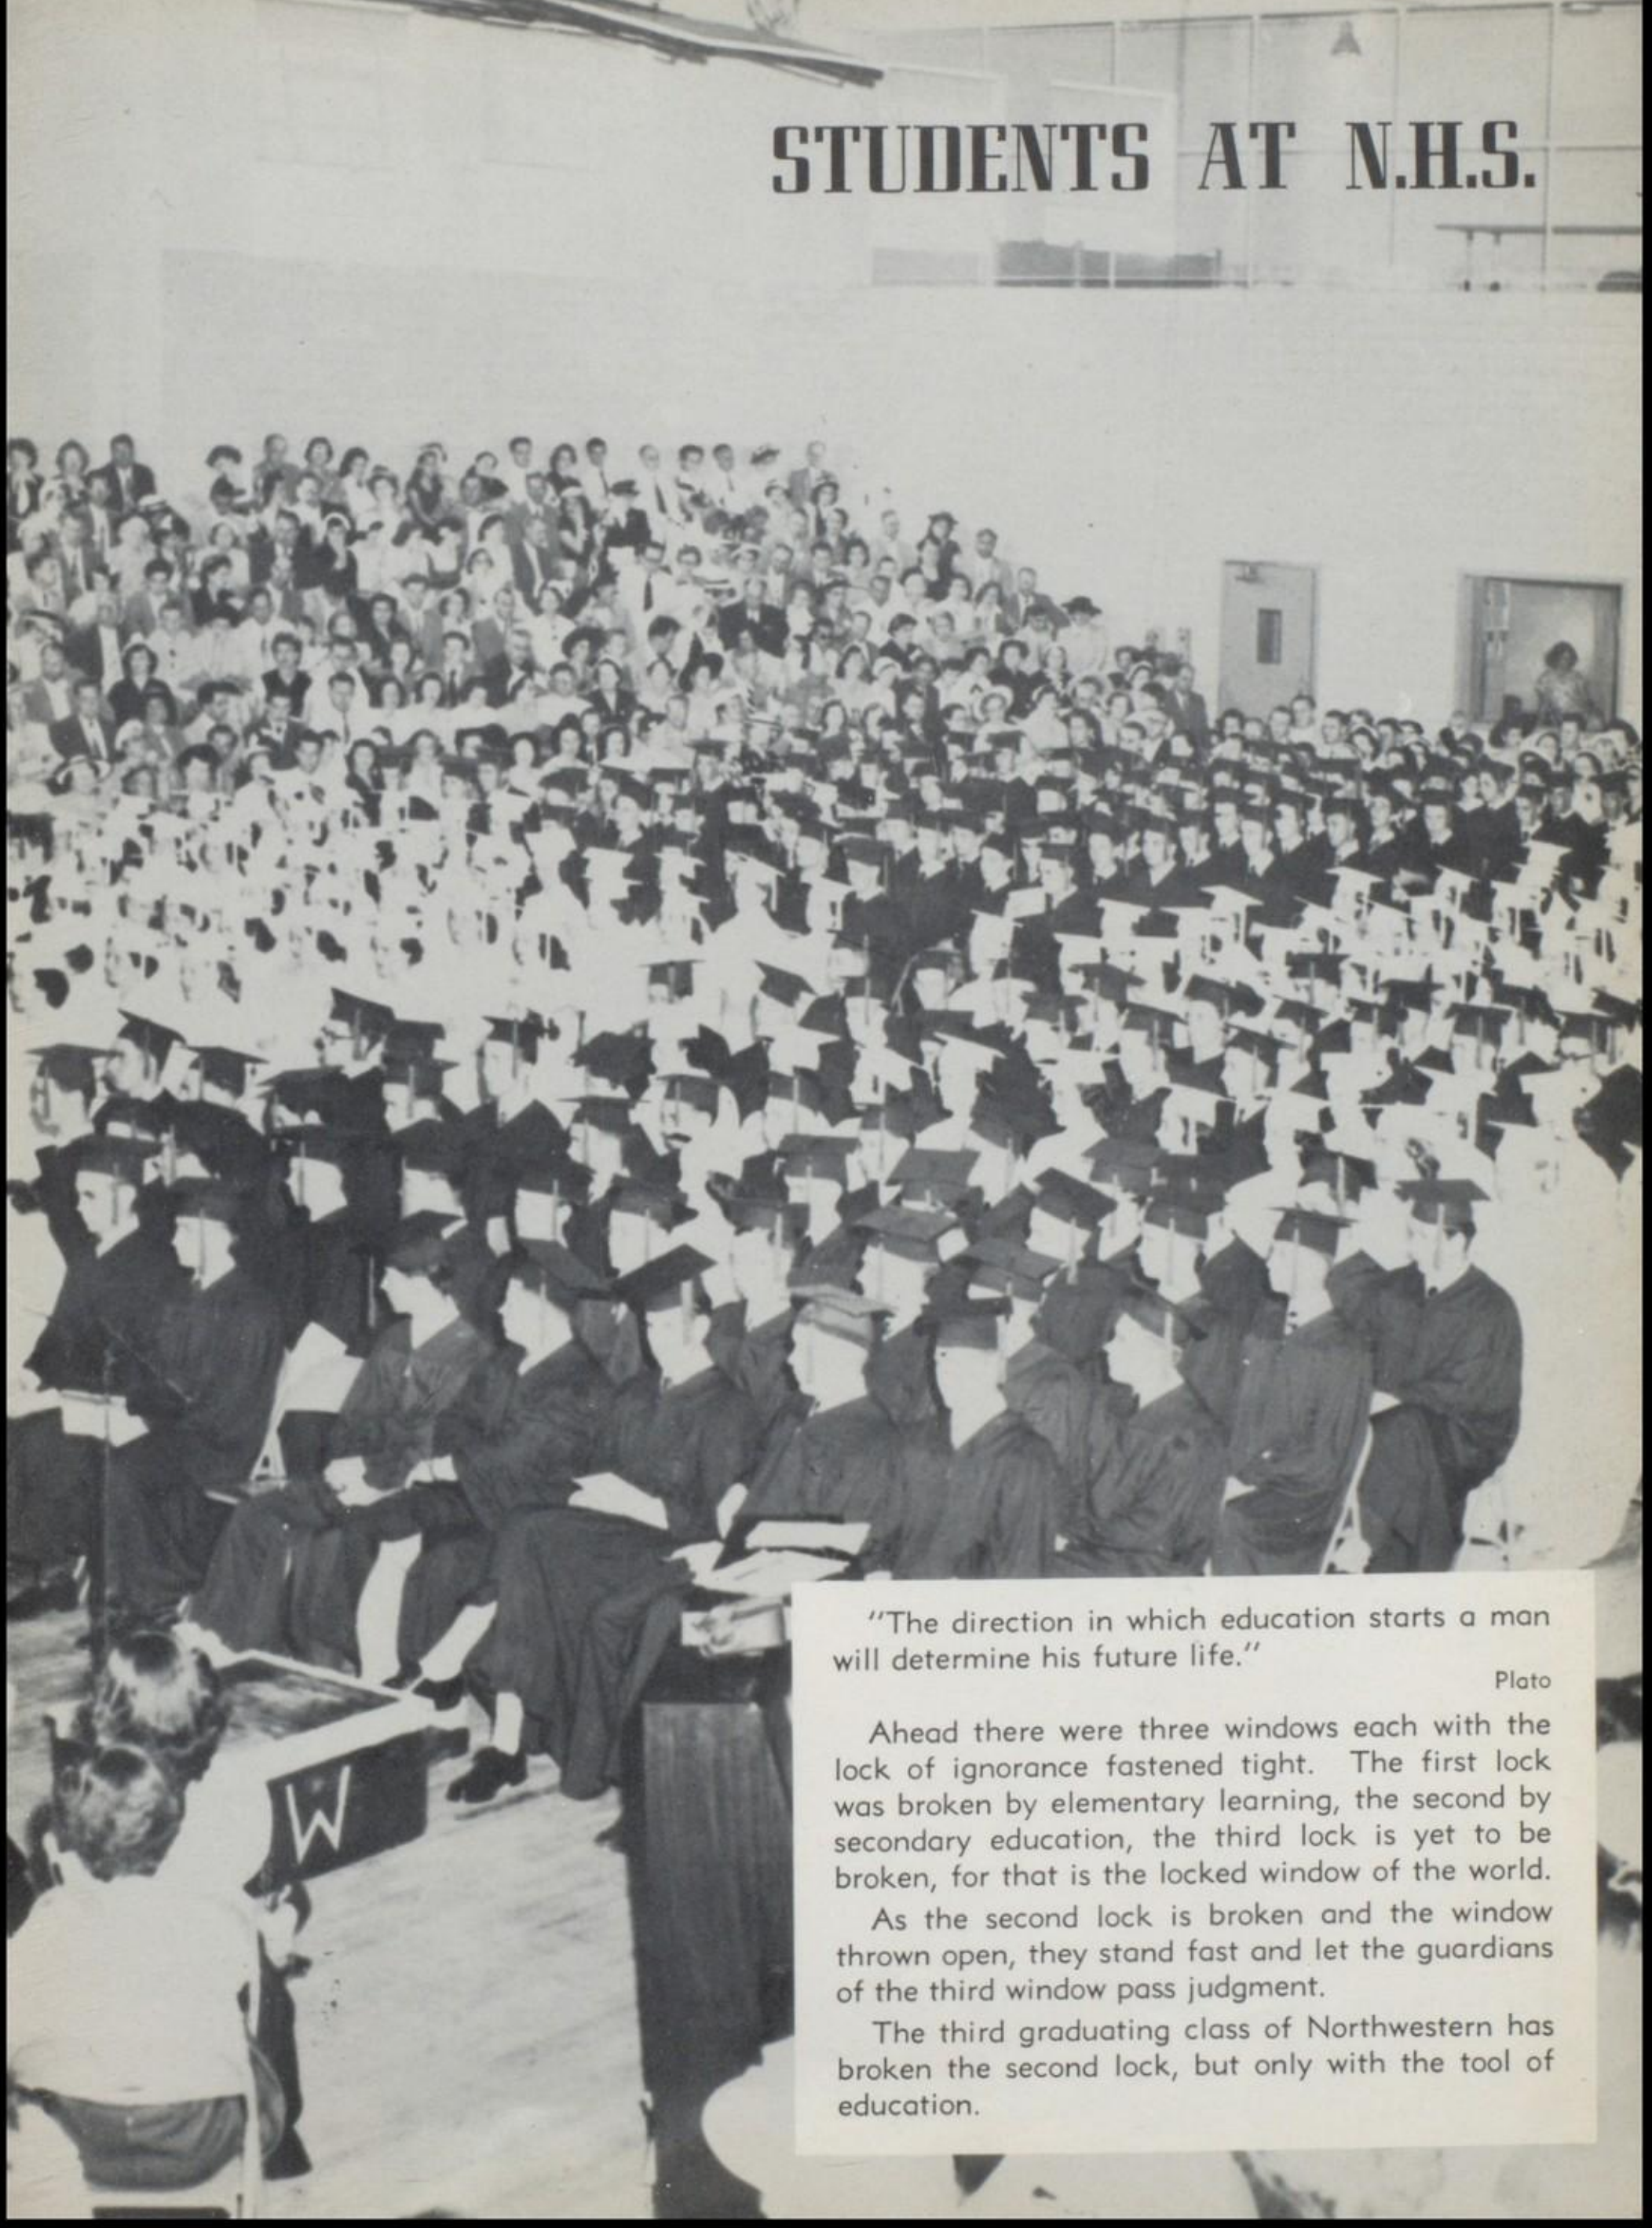
With the click of a shutter, the flash of a bulb, another event is captured for the window of high school memories.

All school publications benefit from the art of photography. The darkroom becomes a familiar place to the school photographer.

To coin a phrase, "A picture is worth a thousand memories."



STUDENTS AT N.H.S.



"The direction in which education starts a man will determine his future life."

Plato

Ahead there were three windows each with the lock of ignorance fastened tight. The first lock was broken by elementary learning, the second by secondary education, the third lock is yet to be broken, for that is the locked window of the world.

As the second lock is broken and the window thrown open, they stand fast and let the guardians of the third window pass judgment.

The third graduating class of Northwestern has broken the second lock, but only with the tool of education.

CLASS OF 1955

"It is a rough road that leads to the heights of greatness."

Seneca

An essential part of a window is the sash which surrounds the glass. Without these supporting pieces there could be no window, for nothing would hold the panes in.

A vital part of a senior high school is its sophomores and juniors, the underclassmen, without whom there could hardly be a school. They are the seniors of the next years; their activities show their potentialities as the future leaders of the school. There would be no glory in being seniors if there had not been the hard work of the years before.

Seniority is a reward granted to those who have traveled successfully a hard road; it is the transformation of a window sash into a clear pane of glass to be supported by those who come after, those who will look at and through the pane to see what they some day will be.

"To most people nothing is more troublesome than the effect of thinking."

Alfred Tennyson

SENIORS — Better late than never!

Fostering the program of student government is Northwestern's Student Council. From time to time the executive group of the Student Council meets with their sponsor Mr. Keith Cartee to plan future meetings. President Joe Klein and parliamentarian Eleanor McVeary are standing behind Mr. Cartee. Seated are the corresponding secretary Pearl Gold and recording secretary Blakely Littleton. Treasurer Marshall Gerstel is seated at left and vice-president Bob Dove is seated at far right.

EXTRA-CURRICULAR ACTIVITIES

A colorful stained glass window is composed of many parts, each fitting into its own place. A school with interest for everyone has many activities, each fitting into the window of school life, each contributing a bit of color to the entire picture.

From honor societies to service organizations, from social clubs to special interest groups — there is opportunity for everyone at Northwestern to find a place for himself among fellow students.

Each activity, each little piece of glass, helps to inform the community of the school life of today and of the citizens of tomorrow.

"He does good to himself who does good to his friend."

Parent-Teachers Association

Our Parent-Teacher's Association provides an excellent means of connection between the home and the school. It acquaints the parents with their child's school and teachers, and gives the teachers on opportunity to know their students' parents and to discuss the student with them.

But our Parent-Teacher's Association has also been of great assistance to the school in a material way. This year they sponsored the annual Jamboree, purchased some new instruments for the band and new equipment for the physical education department. They also obtained a new sixteen milimeter camera and equipment for the school.

Parent-Teacher's Association officers for the year were; Mr. Robert Dove, president; Mr. Lloyd B. MacEwen, treasurer; Mrs. Paul E. Nystrom, recording secretary; Miss Clara Bricker, corresponding secretary; and Mr. John P. Speicher, School representative and principal of Northwestern.

Major Chester E. Whiting and the United States Army Field band have presented five concerts to the student body of Northwestern.

The soloists caused many a girl's heart to jump. The chorus presented a fine repertoire at each performance. Precision plus are the words for the drummer's routine, and the band showed that it was the "Million Dollar Band".

Major Whiting and the band deserve a Northwestern blue and white salute for the time spent in bringing fine music to our school.

Major Chester E. Whiting,
Commanding Officer.

The United States Army Field Band

Since the opening of the school, Northwesternites have looked forward to the annual concerts of the Army Field Band, under the direction of Major Chester E. Whiting.

One of the established traditions of Northwestern High School is that of the annual Music Revue, which is presented by the music department.

Each year a script is written which revolves around a theme. In 1952, the theme was "Famous Stars"; in 1953, "Call Back Later", a story about a theatrical agent; in 1954, "Beach Liberty", a tale of sailors on leave.

Student director Clarence Beall conducts Northwestern's "A" Band at the annual concert which was given on February 14, 1954.

Hi-Y

Through the windows you have just seen, you have had an opportunity to gaze upon the many activities which go into making the student life of Northwestern.

We are proud to have had a part in opening these windows for you. Through them you have seen the things which have helped us to grow and to develop into early adulthood.

We at Northwestern feel that it is the responsibility and the obligation of the sophomores and the juniors to continue to present the same wholesome pictures of Northwestern. Seniors have played their role in helping to get our school started and, in three short years, to have it recognized as one of the outstanding high schools in our land.

For us these "Windows of Northwestern" will never close . . . they will constantly serve to remind us of the hope and the faith and the trust which have been placed in us.

Now as we enter into a more stern life, we ourselves become "windows" by which Northwestern will be judged. It is our fervent hope and prayer that our lives will continue to be dominated by the spirit of fellowship and the act of service to others.
